

LAVISH DECORATIONS.

London Has Outdone Herself for the Coronation.

NO EXPENSE SPARED.

London, June 18.—Although it is a week before the coronation, London is already being crowded, and the process of everything has been advanced. The 7,000,000 people in the metropolis expect to make a great deal of money out of their 1,500,000 guests, and from present prospects they are likely to succeed. The Americans, especially, are expected to furnish wealth for the Londoners, for while the bulk of the visitors will be from the English provinces, by far the greatest number of foreigners will be from America. Every Atlantic liner that has arrived during the past three or four weeks has brought its full quota of visitors from the United States. At all times Americans are regarded as rich plucking by the British shopkeepers and hotelkeepers, but this is supposed to be an unusually favorable opportunity for the craft. Interesting accounts are heard of various hotels of the arrangements made for the coronation season. At Claridge's rooms to the value of $10,000 are now occupied by Americans, and at the Hotel Cecil the Yankee visitors have put up $25,000 for rooms for the coronation procession.

The decorations of the city have advanced so far as to enable one to form a good idea of the scope and beauty of the general plan. Artists and others capable of judgment of such matters unanimously agree that this feature of the celebration will eclipse anything of the kind heretofore seen. A striking feature of the street decorations in Westminster are the triumphal arches at one end of Parliament street. There is a large central arch and two smaller ones in the Gothic style, supported by slender red and white columns, the whole covered with cloth of gold and decorated with the shields and arms of the counties of the United Kingdom and Ireland. On the summit there is an open balustrade of pinnacles on which St. George, St. Patrick, St. Andrew and St. David are grouped around the lion. The balustrade is decorated with flowers.

The arch at Hyde Park corner has two sets of six columns decorated with the royal arms and those of India and the chief colonies. The columns are lined with wreaths of roses and surrounded with winged allegorical figures in gold playing musical instruments. A similar arch in Whitehall street is lined with Venetian masts and decorated shields displaying the rose, and has a portico of long streamers showing the king's badges with wreaths, roses and the imperial crown with long tassels. Near Abbey row all the white columns bearing the royal arms and surrounded by the garlands rise out of a forest of greenery. The columns are surrounded by winged figures standing on blue spheres linked with streams of roses and bound with white ribbons.

The decorations at Marlborough House are so arranged that after dark it will be possible to use them for illuminations. A beautiful arch of cut crystal, in the form of a branch of laurel leaves, has been erected over the gates. The crystal is of various natural cuts, and is, so to speak, jeweled with ruby berries. Rising from the center of the arch is a crystal medallion, beside the garter and the motto of that ancient order. The king's cypher appears in the center of the medallion and is surrounded by the royal crown and lion.

Over the entrance to York House, in Ambassadors' Court, there has been arranged a huge Prince of Wales' badge of cut crystal. Running out from it on either side are scrolls of amber illuminations. An oval cut crystal medallion surrounds the badge and shows the king's cypher and crown in the center. On the western frontage of that part of St. James' palace which is York House, a large crystal shield and crown is displayed. The shield has a border of rich amber color, surrounding the blue, white and amethyst as lined out by colored crystals.

Gorgeous as are the decorations and illuminations of public edifices, they are rivaled by the embellishments of business houses and private residences. The decorations of Lady Burdett Coutts' house are on a grand scale and scarcely less imposing are the decorations of Lord Rothschild's residence. Other elaborate decorative schemes have been carried out with pleasing effect by H. J. King, in Piccadilly, and M. von Andre, brother-in-law of Mrs. Chatterjee Devereux. It is estimated that M. von Andre has gone one better than he did at the time of the queen's jubilee, when his green and white decorations were voted the finest in all London. Carlton House Terrace, from one end to the other, presents a very fine appearance. All the houses have been decorated both in front and back, and during the nights of next week they are to be magnificently illuminated. The finest private display of all, however, has been made by Lord Glenelg, at 19 Piccadilly, but it is hardly a cause for surprise, as few have ever surpassed him in festive decorations. In the matter of decorations the question of expense seems never to have been taken into consideration, but what has contributed still more to the success is the fact that a uniform and harmonious plan has been followed out with the result that there are no such eyesores as spoiled the effect of the decorations at the time of the queen's jubilee.

DENIES THE ALLEGATION.

Forest Supervisor Langenberg Says Timber Is Not Being Cut on Reserve.

Regarding the report that timber was being cut on the Pecos river forest reserve, the forest supervisor, George Langenberg, writes as follows to the Las Vegas Optic:

Las Vegas, N. M., June 13, 1902.—I am this day in receipt of letter from the honorable commissioner of the general land office, stating that "in case of this kind, where there is a mistake, it would appear desirable that a supervisor should enlighten the press by correct and reliable statement, to avoid mischievous confusion." The above has reference to an article which appeared in your daily of May 26, 1902, wherein you charge me with connivance in allowing timber depredations on the Pecos river forest reserve, of which I am at present in charge.

The timber that you refer to, within the Gallinas canyon, and within the said reserve, as having been unlawfully cut, was purchased legally from the United States government by Margaret Romero. All of the ties that have been hauled to the Hot Springs branch of the Santa Fe Railway company have not been cut from the reserve, but instead a great many of them have been cut from the Las Vegas grant.

I would be pleased to have you make this correction of misstatements in your paper. If you care to do this, I would be glad to have a copy of the paper, that I may forward same to the honorable commissioner.

Very respectfully,
GEO. LANGENBERG,
Forest Supervisor Pecos River Forest Reserve.

ON THE DESERT.

J. A. Adams Wandered Away from the Camp and Perished.

J. A. Adams, a grandson of old John Brown, whose "soul goes marching on," wandered away from his camp on the Colorado desert last month and perished for want of water. The story of his disappearance is graphically told by Charles Fay, one of the party, in the Yuma Sentinel.

"We were out on the desert prospecting for gold," said Fay. "An Indian, whom we had employed to show us where to find water on the desert, caught his foot in the stirrup while mounting his horse and fell on his back. The horse started to run, dragging the Indian by one foot. As the ground was covered with jagged rocks the Indian would have been killed had not Adams run up and seized the horse by the bit. The animal, wild with fright, reared and plunged. Adams was twice thrown upon the rocks and his arm broken, and once the horse's hoof struck him, but he still gripped the bit until Mr. Lamere and I succeeded in releasing the Indian.

"At dusk we camped. For the night and within an hour Adams was delirious and raving like a maniac. Some time during the night he left camp. As soon as we discovered that he had gone we made every effort to find him, but could not do much until daylight, when we found his tracks in the sand. We followed his tracks all that day and until about 3 o'clock the next day, when we came to a hard rocky place at the foot of some rock hills. Here we lost the trail, and try as we might we could not find it again.

"For three days we searched the hills, but not a trace of the man could we discover, though we all knew that somewhere within a radius of twenty or thirty miles lay the body of one of the bravest men that ever lost his life in that great death trap, the Colorado desert."

A LOVE FEAST.

Razors Will Be Barred from This Democratic Meeting.

New York, June 19.—For the first time since his retirement from the presidency Grover Cleveland tonight delivered a speech to a political audience. The occasion that draws the former president from his home at Princeton to New York is the opening of the new home of the Thibault club, Broadway and Seventy-Fourth street. That the gathering is of great political significance goes without saying, for it is well known that Mr. Cleveland could not be induced to deliver a political address unless he were convinced that it would have an important bearing on the future welfare of his party. This fact is universally recognized and as a consequence those who take an interest in national politics are manifesting intense interest in the meeting.

The gathering, according to the managers of the club, is not for the purpose of launching a new democracy, but to welcome all leaders of democratic thought who may have been opposed to each other in the past and to make "the occasion of the opening of the club a direct effort to harmonize various discordant elements of the party." To this end democrats from every section of the country have been invited to be present, and no section of faction has been ignored.

Former Senator David B. Hill has accepted an invitation and it is believed that a complete reconciliation between him and Mr. Cleveland may be brought about. Among others who are expected to be present are Senator Bacon of Georgia, Mayor Patrick Collins of Boston, ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney, Dr. Felix Adler, Joan D. Millburn of Buffalo, William Everett of Massachusetts, Governor Aycock of North Carolina, W. Bourke Cockran, Lewis Nixon, Judge Rose, of Arkansas; District Attorney Jerome of New York; Edward Atchison, of Boston, and many democratic members of the United States senate, the house of representatives and the state legislatures.

VERY SPECTACULAR.

Emperor William Impersonated Charlemagne in All Details.

Berlin, June 19.—Recalling his historic pilgrimage of the Holy Land in his vivid and striking imagery was the visit of the kaiser to Aix la Chapelle today. In order to give more brilliancy to the occasion the Imperial suite camped outside the walls from midnight to daybreak, when the party entered the city on horseback. The kaiser dressed in Charlemagne. He was preceded by heralds trumpeting his arrival and followed by a company of feudal lords, all in costumes of their ancestors were in the Middle Ages. At the city gates a body of notables delivered to the kaiser the symbolic keys on a crimson cushion, and the cortege then proceeded through the medieval part of town. After a solemn visit to the cathedral the kaiser was escorted to the town hall, the ancient headquarters of Charlemagne, where he met the authorities and notables of the town.

The assault occurred at Wamsley's bridge over the Rio Grande. Wamsley had tied a stone in a handkerchief and was about to strike Myers upon the head with it when the stone slipped out. He is looking for the best place to set up a new electric transfer table when the company has been completed. Mr. Hardy says that the Santa Fe has a new shop there and that the shop is in a new building in operation in a great improvement over those at Topeka. When the plant at this place gets in full operation then the tracks on which cars here are transferred will also be moved by electricity. Mr. Hardy says the big electric hoist which the Topeka boiler-makers built for Albuquerque last winter looks like a top. The locomotive which it is designed to lift is run in on the track under the lifting machine, four big piston rods are quickly lowered and fastened to a heavy piece of steel, passing under the engine, and without a groan the hoist slowly hoists its burden to the desired height.

Regarding a former employee of the local shops, now of Topeka, the Journal of that city says: A. T. Parfitt, foreman of the boiler shop, always has some way of doing things at a saving when there is an emergency presented. In the fire room where the fires of the new locomotives were so long that they could not be easily handled on the machine adapted to reducing the size of the ends, Mr. Parfitt devised a small hammer which is run by compressed air and so located that the 19-footers can be put through without the least inconvenience. Fastened to two perpendicular supports the hammer works up and down at a rapidity of stroke that is remarkable, bending the metal out to the proper size in a short time. It is regulated by the foot of the operator.
